DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1-10 and 13-21 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Cho et al.

Cho et al. shows, figure 6 and columns 9-12, a point of purchase video (POS data) distribution system. The system is a video media distribution network including (1) a distribution center (display administrator) which transmits video program segments to the receiving sites, (2) receivers which receive the segments, (3) a tracking system which tracks the product movement at the receiving sites, (4) a network management system which forms playlists (storing a plurality of multimedia presentations) for each of the receiving sites in response to inputs from a user, and (5) display units which display the playlists in the receiving sites. The user, located in the distribution center, has access to the product movement information. The system uses video clips, a "wheel" concept (scheduling file), playlist, "playlist sockets", and a "store and forward" feature. The wheel is a cycle of time that represents the format which video clips are packaged. A wheel can be played over and over. A wheel may fill a "playlist socket", which defines a start, and end time automatically (determining schedule). The "store and forward" feature allows video segments to be stored in the receiving site and later forwarded to the display unit automatically by the system's network management software. Figure 6 shows a flowchart, which allows one to; depending on level of access, customize displays. (scanning, determining/assigning and modifying)

When playlists are created or updated, the program determines which additional video clips are needed at the stores and sets a pending flag. The pending flag remains with these additional video clips until they are uplinked to the store, which needs them. UPLINK loads the Uplink Form 295, (upload/download, transferring) which compiles the information required at the receiving sites for the playlists. MODEM loads the Modem Form 264, which gives the user elaborate modem communication with all the stores, which allows user to update playlists and perform system maintenance.

FIG. 6 is a process flow chart of the system's Socket Management Form (a remote storing computing device). Playlist sockets are places where a "wheel" (site-specific presentation, tab-delimited format, converting retrieved data into a form useful for populating respective fields) can be placed. When the user selects the PLAYLISTS option, the program enters the Socket Management Form 262 or 263, depending on the user's security level, and displays a list of all store sites, the list of sockets for store no. 1, as a default, and a list of all the available playlists 265. The user can then move through the list of stores displaying (playing presentation) the sockets for each store in the process. The Store Info Database and the Playlist Database provide the information needed for this display.

The user can then select from the available playlists to fill sockets of a particular store site 266. Each store site has its own number of sockets. For example, if a store is displaying 30-minute wheels of playlists for 18 hours, the store has 36 sockets, which must be filled with wheels of playlists. At this point, the user can also edit a playlist and/or create a new playlist depending on the user's security level. To edit a playlist, the Edit Playlist Form 267 is loaded.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 11 and 12 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Cho et al., as applied above.

Cho et al. shows all of the limitations of the claims except for specifying the use of HTTP protocol and a web browser.

The examiner takes Official notice that the use of HTTP protocol and a web browser are well known in the art and are used in order to provide better network communication.

Based on the discussion above, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art, at the time the invention was made, to modify Cho et al. network communication system to incorporate the use of HTTP protocol and a web browser in order to provide better network communication.

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Ohta and Brown et al. show communication systems of interest.
